Glossary

Type of recorded sexual assault incidents

This report shows Sexual Assault incidents that come to the attention of, and are recorded by, NSW Police. 'Sexual assault' includes the police incident categories of sexual assault, aggravated sexual assault and assault with intent to have sexual intercourse. Recorded Sexual assaults can be categorised into three types:

Adult Sexual Assault: incidents involving victims aged 16 years and over, in line with the legal age of consent.

Contemporary Child Sexual Assault: involves victims under 16 years of age at the time of both the incident and the reporting.

Historical Child Sexual Assault: involves victims under 16 years of age at the time of the incident, but who were 16 years or older at the time of reporting.

Age refers to the victim's age at the time the offence occurred.

Pathways of reporting Sexual Assault incidents to NSW Police

In person reporting to police involves the victim visiting or phoning NSW Police to make a formal complaint. This traditional reporting pathway enables some level of formal investigation.

The Sexual Assault Reporting Option (SARO) is a confidential online pathway that allows individuals aged 16 and over to report sexual assault to NSW Police without speaking directly to police or triggering a formal criminal investigation. SARO offers an alternative to traditional reporting methods, such as face-to-face reporting, enabling victims to share their experience in a way that may feel safer and more comfortable.

SARO reports can be submitted via the online Community Portal (since January 2023), or by completing a downloadable PDF form. SARO submissions create a police record of the incident, but do not lead to investigation or follow-up unless specifically requested by the victim. All questions are optional, and reports can be made anonymously.

The Child Protection Helpline is a state-wide telephone service that receives, and screens reports of suspected abuse or neglect of children and young people. Members of the public and mandatory reporters within NSW can call the helpline to make a report. Mandatory reporters, including health care professionals, welfare service providers, educators (including those in schools and childcare), residential service workers, disability support staff, and members of religious organisations, are required by law to report suspected child abuse and neglect.

Qualified caseworkers staff the helpline. When a report suggests sexual abuse, serious physical abuse, or neglect (i.e. a potential crime), it is referred to the Joint Child Protection Response Program (JCPRP). The JCPRP, which is made up of staff from DCJ, NSW Health, and NSW Police, assesses whether the report should go to the Child Abuse and Sex Crime Squad or a local police command for investigation. BOCSAR data captures all reports referred to police through this process.
